Be One Teach One

A free program, "Be One Teach One" was created by second year TouroCOM students Siatta Dunbar and Risa Siegel to bring together young female students from all over New York City.

In the workshops, the students explore science, health and careers in medicine with medical students and faculty, and are inspired to work in underserved communities.

The "Be One Teach One" program resumes in September.

Sixth grader Diamond Smith explores human anatomy with Ester Roth, a first year student at Touro College of Osteopathic Medicine (TouroCOM) at a recent "Be One Teach One" workshop at the college in Harlem.
